

Fowlerville District Library's Reasons to Pop-Up at the Junior High School

- The school district and the public library share the same geographic boundaries.
- Public library use is a lifelong skill. The school is fostering this skill by hosting visits by the public library staff.
- Public and school libraries share the same goals like digital and information literacy, access to information.
- School library staff and public library staff have complimentary skills. The school staff knows about reading levels and curriculum standards; while the public library staff is more involved with the teen social and entertainment needs and focus more on reading for pleasure.
- To help optimize the Chrome books that the school provide the students and the public libraries eBook collection a partnership is a mutually beneficial.
- Studies show that access to books is an important part of a youth's development, a partnership increases this access.

Works Cited

- Vincelette, Pete, and Priscilla Queen. "School and Public Library Collaboration." School Library Monthly 28.4 (2012): 14-6. ProQuest. Web. 10 Nov. 2015.
- Smith, Daniella. "Collaboration between Rural School and Public Youth Services Librarians." New Library World 115.3 (2014): 160-74. ProQuest. Web. 10 Nov. 2015.
- Abram, S. (2011). School Library/Public library partnerships. Internet@Schools, 18(4), 21-22,4. Retrieved from <http://search.proquest.com.proxy.lib.wayne.edu/docview/888578501?accountid=14925>